Seniors Work for Class Trip

Cheryl Huebner, Treasurer, Jim Howarth, President, Judy Schnitzler, Vice President; Mr. Schwerdfeger, Advisor. NOT PICTURED: Carol Albrecht, Secretary.

The Seniors sponsored many activities throughout the year. Money making projects included a card and bunco party, after-ball-game dances, movies, a car wash, and work days. The class sold candy bars, baked goods, magazines, and concessions at basketball games. On one cold day in December the high school girls were allowed to wear slacks if they bought a ticket from a Senior. The class also co-sponsored the musical, 'Oklahoma!' The last project of the year was a basketball game between the firemen and the senior boys and a game played by the firemen's wives and the female members of the Class of '70.

CLASSES

Judy Wand, President; Mr. Kuhl, Advisor; Nancy Oates, Secretary; Connie Haas, Treasurer; Kermit Krug, Vice President.

The Juniors entered the 1969-70 school year with high hopes. In September many of the class members received their class rings, officially proving their higher rank as upperclassmen. The first semester, the class of '71 was rather inactive. The class was unable to have a class play and a Sno-Ball Dance (which had been customary in recent years). Their one major project, collecting walnuts, was a failure, for while waiting for a guaranteed market, the walnuts rotted on the roof of a shed!

The second semester, at least, was more productive. The Juniors became involved in the production of the Junior-Senior sponsored musical and planned and prepared the annual spring prom.

Teresa Parrott, Vice President; Cheryl Potter, President; Mr. Carroll, Advisor; Kathleen Albrecht, Secretary; Lon Francomb, Treasurer.

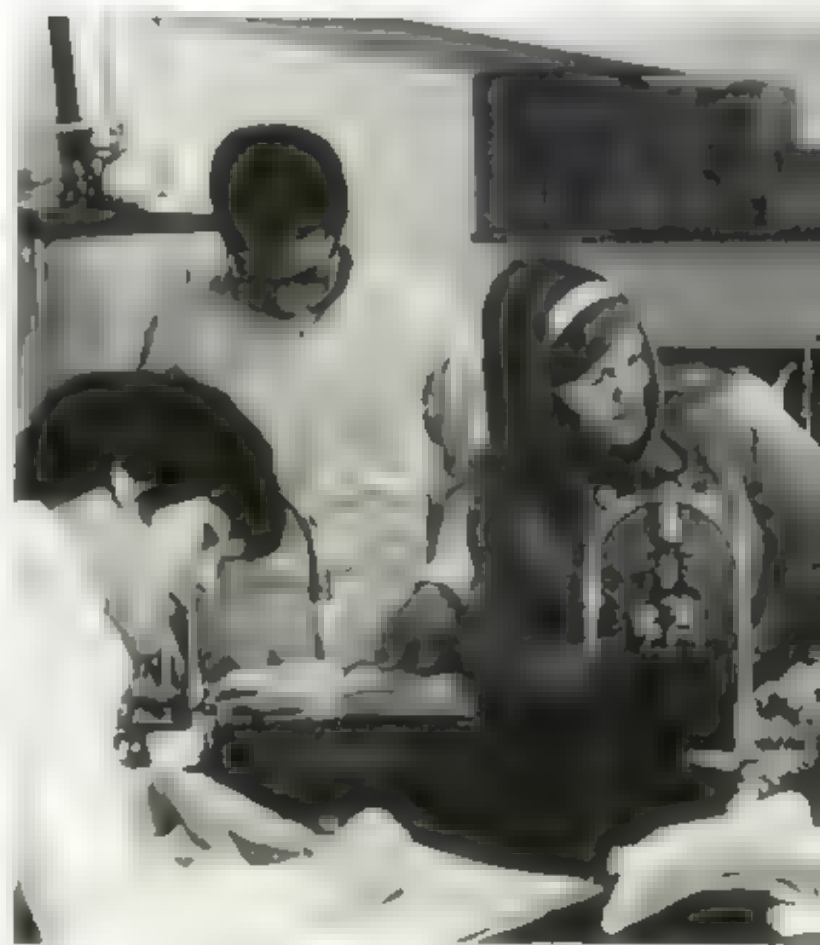

As Freshmen, the class of '72 developed a class constitution to facilitate class meetings. But this year the idea seemed totally useless, and the constitution was abolished. The Sophomores began a year of projects which included a bake sale and a dance featuring the "Twilight Lemon." The class also operated a stand at the Flea Market on Terrapin Ridge and sold various items including apple cider made by some of the Sophomores themselves.

Looking forward to the end of their sophomore year (including the completion of Drivers Training courses), the class members accelerated down the home stretch, steering toward their junior year.

The class of '73 entered their first year of high school, anticipating great changes. Classes seemed more difficult, activities more plentiful, but times more fleeting.

Earth Day

As part of the nationwide observance of Earth Day on April 22, 1970, the entire student body of the Elizabeth Schools participated in various projects. Under the organization of the Senior Class, separate classes were assigned specific tasks--such as picking up litter in the schoolyard, from the streets of Elizabeth, and along a five-mile stretch of Route 84 and the Scales Mound blacktop.

Other groups were assigned to collect samples of water from different rivers and streams in order to test for contamination levels. Another carload of students took pictures of garbage being dumped along country roads and into the Apple River.

After these activities were completed, the students reassembled in the gymnasium to discuss their work and future plans.

In fact, the success of Earth Day lies in the future involvement of both students and townspeople in the prevention of the pollution of their own environment.

GAA Cycles Toward Physical Fitness

After school once a week the members of the GAA met and participated in varied sports activities, including a bike hike (below), football, soccer, softball, a volleyball tournament, a basketball tourney, and track and field events.

The girls also went swimming once, sponsored an all-girl slumber party in the gym, and attended a play-day at Stockton and a track meet at Savanna.

A lot of headaches are involved in getting the activities and atmosphere of a school year down in the black and white of the pictures and print of a yearbook.

The Terp staff struggled with the language and procedures of a new world--a world of die cut 24-point headlines, mask art, triplicate layouts, cropping, bleeding, and overprinting. Editors dealt with camera-shy teachers who hid from the photographer, skwirmy third-graders who blurred pictures, and a national mail strike which upset production schedules.

Terrapins' Ortscheid

Basketball season takes top priority during the winter months at Elizabeth High School. Practices and games strain the muscles, but the team enjoys the action and competition. This year the Terrapins' captain, Dennis Ortscheid, was unanimously elected for the Jo Daviess County coaches' all-conference team and also was elected most valuable player by his teammates.
